

SO YOU WANT TO BE A PRESS PHOTOGRAPHER? FIND OUT HOW ON PAGE 62...

PROFESSIONAL Photographer

www.professionalphotographer.co.uk

SEPTEMBER 2007 ■ £3.80

Make it BIG!

How event photography can net you thousands

Portraiture

Brian Griffin & Mark Zibert on photographing people

Competitions

How one Pro reader faced up to the challenge – and won

+ TESTED

- Lastolite Studio Cubelite
- Dye-sub printer round-up

Wide-angle wonder

Mamiya's stunning new 28mm optic on test

Visible Dust Senor Loupe £45 & Arctic Butterfly 724 Travel kit £120

01293 823232; sales@uk.kata-bags.com; www.visibledust.com

Dust can be the bane of a photographer's life, with hours spent retouching images blighted by unsightly specks. The simple way to avoid this is to buy some cleaning swabs, but before you do it's worth checking there is actually dust there. So unless you're blessed with Superman's X-ray vision, you'll need the Visible Dust Senor Loupe to get a closer look. It features high-grade K9 optical glass (nothing to do with Kryptonite) and incorporates six bright LEDs that provide a clear 5x magnified view of your CCD. It's simple to use and very effective.

Fortunately, VisibleDust also makes a number of products that help remove any unwanted fragments you spy and I used the Travel kit that comes with both wet and dry cleaning tools. There is everything to facilitate an immaculate sensor, including the curious sounding Arctic Butterfly SCF brush that has a permanent charge to attract dust.

VERDICT: The best sensor cleaning solution I've tested to date. And the Loupe takes the guesswork out of cleaning your sensor.

